

A proven multi-touch sequence for converting aged leads — print this and pin it next to your phone.

DAY 1	Direct Mail	Send a handwritten yellow letter. Personal tone, no corporate branding. Gets you noticed before you ever call. "Hi [Name], I was reviewing some information and noticed you had looked into [product] a while back. I'd love to see if I can help — no pressure. Give me a call when you get a chance. — [Your Name]"
DAY 3	First Phone Call	Use the "Honest Follow-Up" approach. Be direct about how you got their info. Transparency builds trust instantly. "Hi [Name], this is [Your Name]. I know it's been a while since you looked into [product], but I wanted to check in — have you found what you were looking for, or is that still on your radar?"
DAY 4	Email	Plain text, personal. No HTML templates. Subject line that doesn't sound like marketing. Subject: "Quick question about [product]" Body: "Hi [Name], I left you a message yesterday. Just wanted to make sure I'm not wasting your time — are you still exploring options for [product]? If so, I may be able to help. Either way, no hard feelings. — [Your Name]"
DAY 5	Rest Day	No contact. Give the prospect space to process your previous touches. They may call you back.
DAY 6	Second Call	Try a different time of day. Reference your previous touches to show persistence (not stalking). "Hey [Name], it's [Your Name] again. I sent you a note and an email earlier this week about [product]. I'm not trying to bug you — just wanted to make one more attempt. Do you have 2 minutes?"
DAY 7	Final Touch	Door knock (if local, high-value) OR send a value-add email with a relevant article or tip. Make this touch about giving, not asking. "Hi [Name], I wanted to share a quick tip about [topic] that's helped a lot of my clients. [1-2 sentence tip]. If you ever want to chat, I'm here. — [Your Name]"

After Day 7: If no response, move the lead to a "nurture" list. Set a reminder to re-contact in 60–90 days with a fresh approach. Many aged leads convert on the second or third cycle.
