

Opening Scripts

1. The "Rates Changed" Opener

"Hi [Name], this is [Your Name] with [Company]. I'm reaching out because rates have changed quite a bit since you first looked into [product]. A lot of people in your situation are finding better options now. Do you have a quick minute to see if that applies to you?"

Best for: insurance, mortgage, and financial product leads

2. The "Honest Follow-Up" Opener

"Hi [Name], this is [Your Name]. I'll be upfront — I got your information from a form you filled out a while back about [product]. I know it's been some time. Did you ever find what you were looking for, or is that still something you're thinking about?"

Best for: leads aged 30–90 days; builds immediate trust through honesty

3. The "Warm Reconnect" Opener

"Hey [Name], this is [Your Name]. We haven't spoken before, but I noticed you had explored [product] options recently. I work with a lot of folks in [area/situation] and thought I might be able to help. Is now an okay time, or should I call back?"

Best for: leads aged 90+ days; low-pressure approach

Voicemail Scripts

1. First Call Voicemail

"Hi [Name], this is [Your Name] with [Company]. I'm calling about [product] — I may have some updated information that could save you [time/money]. My number is [phone]. No pressure at all, just give me a call back if you're interested. Thanks!"

Keep it under 30 seconds. Speak slowly when leaving your number.

2. Follow-Up Voicemail

"Hey [Name], it's [Your Name] again. I left you a message a few days ago about [product]. I know you're busy — just wanted to make one more attempt. If you're still interested, I'm at [phone]. If not, no worries at all. Take care."

Reference your previous attempt. Always give them an easy out.

Email Templates

1. The Quick Check-In

Subject: Quick question about [product]

Hi [Name],

I noticed you had looked into [product] a while back. I wanted to check in — did you ever find what you were looking for?

If not, I might be able to help. Things have changed a bit since you last looked, and there may be better options available now.

Either way, no pressure. Just reply to this email or give me a call at [phone].

Best,
[Your Name]

2. The Value-First Email

Subject: A quick tip about [product/topic]

Hi [Name],

I've been helping people with [product] for [X] years, and one thing I always tell folks is: [one actionable tip relevant to their situation].

[Your Name]
[phone]

Top 5 Objection Handlers

"I need to think about it."

"Absolutely, take your time. Can I ask — what specifically do you want to think over? Sometimes I can clarify things right now so you have better info to think with."

"I can't afford it right now."

"I totally understand. A lot of my clients felt the same way at first. Would it help if I showed you some options that fit different budgets? There might be something that works."

"I already found someone."

"Great, glad you got taken care of. Just out of curiosity — are you happy with what you ended up with? Sometimes it's worth a second look, especially if rates have changed."

"Stop calling me."

"I completely understand, and I apologize for the interruption. I'll remove your number right now. Have a great day." (Then immediately mark as DNC in your CRM.)

"I'm not interested."

"No problem at all. Before I let you go — is it that you're not interested in [product] anymore, or just not interested in talking right now? I only ask because if the timing is just off, I'm happy to check back in a few months."

Door-Knocking Script

[Knock, step back 3-4 feet from the door]

"Hi there, are you [Name]? My name is [Your Name], I'm a [title] here in the [city/area] area. I sent you a letter recently about [product] — did you happen to get it?"

[If yes]: "Great! I was in the neighborhood and thought I'd stop by in person. Do you have a couple of minutes? I can show you what's available — no obligation."

[If no]: "No worries. The short version is that I help folks with [product] and I had some information I thought might be useful to you. Can I leave you my card and a quick overview?"

[If they invite you in]: "Thank you. This will only take about 10 minutes. Let me show you a few options and you can decide if any of them make sense for your situation."

Always park on the street (not in their driveway). Carry minimal materials. Be ready to leave immediately if asked.